

Wondering where condos will go

Looking at the plan for Don Mills Centre on the Cadillac Fairview website, I have a sinking feeling.

Could it be that they are building an outdoor mall for a young demographic sector, knowing that it will fail? They could then pull down the new buildings with a "valid" reason and erect the desired condominiums. Why else would the current plan not show where they plan to put them? Why else build extra roads into the current area where, up until now, there has been no need for them? Looking at the current plan, there is nowhere to place any condominiums unless you remove other structures. And condos have a better return on investment than shops.

Epp Arjic